Board okays payroll, capital improvements

By Andrew Herrmann
Staff Writer

The Board of Trustees approved changes in the faculty-administrative payroll Friday, which affected 40 SIU-C employees, including George R. Mace, former vice president for university relations.

The board also approved requests for capital improvements for fiscal year 1984.

Mace, now serving as an associate professor in the Political Science Department, will receive $3,500 per month or $31,500 for the nine-month academic year.

Mace left SIU-C to serve as an executive consultant for the American Council of Education in Washington, D.C. last year, in the midst of a controversy over whether he should receive his $50,148 vice presidential salary while on leave. The board approved the one year professional development paid leave.

William R. Norwood, the board chairman, said Mace's salary "was arrived at the same way any of the salaries were arrived at. Through the department, the vice president and then put on the matters for board action."

President Albert Somit added that the process to determine what Mace's salary would be began in his office.

Stan Irvin, student trustee, said the $31,500 figure was "about average. In relation to his experience and considering the salaries of the other professors in his range, it's not out of line."

The SIU System is seeking over $7.3 million for capital improvements from the state for fiscal 1984, including nearly $3 million for property acquisition and development for the SIU-C School of Medicine.

The priority-ranked list, representing SIU's request for state construction funds, was approved by the Board of Trustees Thursday.

The board also approved a separate list of $1.8 million energy conservation projects at SIU-C and SIU-E, and $2.4 million in capital requests for SIU-C's food production research program.

The requests will be submitted to the Illinois Board of Higher Education as part of planning for the next fiscal year's higher education budget.

The top priority allocation is $311,700 for the planning of a new Dental Education Clinic Facility in Alton. The present dental clinic is housed in a barracks-type building constructed in 1940 and renovated in 1972, according to the capital budget request. A total of 72 dental operations will be provided in this facility, for which the total cost is estimated to be $4.5 million.

Second on the priority list was the property acquisition and development for the School of Medicine. The request is for $2,572,000 for the purchase of the adjacent property and $400,000 for planning.

The top priorities for SIU-C included:

- $332,600 for the replacement of deteriorating underground electrical cables on the SIU-C campus. This is the second of four requests on the project. All four phases are estimated to cost $1 million.

- $373,000 for roof replacement work on seven buildings.

- $227,000 to update the campus fire-alarm system and install a $22,800 fireproof vault at the University's microfilm records center.

- $150,000 to provide for the initial phases of planning and design for the remodeling of Pulliam Hall.

Mace safe alternative to nightstick, cops say

By Jennifer Phillips

Chemical Mace is a curious substance. A liquid repellant used mainly by police to deter violent situations, it remains mysterious to those who don't know much about its functions. Its use by a Carbondale police officer was recently challenged by a Japanese student and an American.

Ipppei Hirai and Chris Salter filed a formal complaint against the Carbondale Police Department after they were maced on the Strip on May 15. The incident took place while crowds of students were emptying the bars and filling the streets on the night of graduation and an officer, Sgt. John Knapp, was trying to control the crowd.

THURSDAY, A LETTER from City Manager Carroll Fry was sent to Salter and Hirai apologizing on behalf of the city for the "unfortunate incident."

However, "after conducting a thorough investigation, we can only conclude that the actions taken by the police officer who complained about were not the result of any sadistic or malicious motives," Fry said in the letter.

He also assured the two that "the police chief (Ed Hogan) is taking measures to refresh the police officers training in the use of Mace as an alternative weapon in order to lessen the likelihood that such incidents would happen again."

But the complaint has caused some people to wonder what Mace is and why and when and how often it is used.

Ag school to try horse sale again

By Andrew Herrmann
Staff Writer

SIU-C has 24 horses for sale. Again.

The School of Agriculture initially decided to sell the horses in August in an effort to cut back on expenses, but due to the low bids, the auction was canceled, said Gilbert Kroening, dean of the School of Agriculture.

Now the department has decided to hold another sale, but this time the horses will be sold individually, unlike the last sale in which the animals were offered only in groups.

Kroening said there were about "half a dozen" bidders at the last auction and that some people had expressed a willingness to purchase the animals individually. He said the University had decided to sell the horses in groups because "we thought maybe someone would want to buy them for a riding stable."

The bids for the groups of horses were too low, he said. "They were in the hundreds, when they should have been in the thousands of dollars." They were lower than anticipated.

He said he hoped the bids this time "would be better. But if we find out that's all their worth, then that's all their worth."

The University is keeping five of the horses while it decides whether to disband the horse program altogether. Kroening said a planning committee has been established to determine the feasibility of keeping the horses and the program.

The sale was "strictly economical," he said. "We had to reduce the inventory. It was beginning to get too expensive to keep them. If we can get by with just five of them, then there is no reason to keep all of them."

USO task force to evaluate services

By William Jason Yong
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Organization is forming a Service Evaluation Task Force to evaluate the merit or lack of merit of a number of services in the University, said USO President Jerry Cook.

Cook called the task force "the most important project to be undertaken by the USO for the upcoming year."

The services to be evaluated are funded by student fees and housing, room and board charges.

The student fees, he said, include Student-to-Student Grant Program fee, Student Center fee, Student Activity fee, Student Recreation fee, Athletic Fund fee, Student Medical Benefit fee and the Revenue Bond fee.

"In recent history, no formal study has undertaken the task of determining student opinion of the merit or lack of merit of these services."

"The purpose of the task force is to formulate both a statement for each individual area and a comprehensive statement with consideration of the seven areas comparatively," Cook said.

The task force, he said, will consist of one representative each from seven student organizations, including the Student Athletic Advisory Committee, Inter-Greek Council, Black Affairs Council, International Student Council, Handicapped Rights Organization, Student Resident Assistants and USO. The Graduate Student Council will have two representatives, he added.

Cook said "it may be necessary to make additional appointments from other constituents to insure appropriate representation."

"Consideration is also being given as to whether the task force should have representatives from Civil Service, the administrative-professional staff and faculty," Cook said.

The recommendations of task force representatives will be completed by Dec. 6, he said.

C. Thomas Busch, assistant to President Albert Somit, said the president's office is "working very closely with Cook on the creation of the task force."

"We are most supportive of the concept," Busch said. "We will give our cooperation in any way we can."

Busch said that currently, Somit's office has two committees which look into academic and non-academic priorities. The service evaluation task force will serve as the third, he said.

"If Jerry had not proposed the task force project, we would have to create our own committee," Busch said.

John Kelly, president of the College of Business and Administration Council, has been appointed by Cook as chairman of the task force, Cook said.

Kelly said the task force procedure will consist of five phases: evaluating financial statements relating to student fees, preparing a non-biased survey, distributing the survey to a sample population, evaluating the results of the survey and preparing a report to be submitted to Somit.

The Committee On Non-Academic Priorities, Kelly said, will not look into those

Hearing on landfill siting issue draws small crowd at SIU-C

By Eric Larson
Staff Writer

Local governments should have input in the process of choosing appropriate landfill sites in Illinois, but should not have the power of final approval or veto, said Jeff Pauline in a public hearing considering the landfill siting issue Monday.

Pauline, a member of the Jackson County Landfill's board of directors, was the only person to give testimony at the hearing, which was held in the Student Center by the Illinois House Energy and Environment Committee. The hearing focused on questions concerning Senate Bills 172 and 171.

SB 172, passed in 1981, instituted a major change in the choosing of sites for waste disposal by giving local governments the authority to approve siting of regional pollution control facilities.

SB 171, also passed in 1981, ruled that after Jan. 1, 1987, no hazardous wastes may be buried in an Illinois landfill unless the generator of the wastes can show that there is no other feasible alternative.

Eleven people attended the hearing in addition to Pauline, and the hearing panel consisting of three members of the Illinois House Landfill and Hazardous Waste Subcommittee.

The poor attendance was because of a lack of publicity in the local media, said Rep. Wayne Alistat, R-58th District, a member of the panel.

"I like the idea of local control of siting," Alistat said. Alistat supported both SB 171 and 172.

The purpose of the hearings is to make people aware of the issue on a first hand basis, Alistat said.

"I like the citizen to be offered a chance at participation," he said. "By 1987 something has to be done — why wait? Let's look for solutions now."

Contrary to Alistat's view, the lack of response to the hearing was because most people in Southern Illinois do not consider waste disposal much of a problem in this area, Pauline said.

Three additional public hearings are scheduled during September and October in other parts of the state, said Rep. Junie Bartulis, R-49th District, chairman of the Landfill and Hazardous Waste Subcommittee. Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-58th District, was the third member of the hearing panel.

The siting issue is being addressed by several states at the present time and a variety of alternative methods of handling the problem have appeared, said John Meister, director of SIU-C's Department of Pollution Control.

Many states give the final approval to a state-level department such as the Environmental Protection Agency, while others give the responsibility to special siting boards, Meister said. Few states, however, give final veto power to local governments, as provided for in Illinois by SB 172, he said.

A broader perspective is needed when making decisions on waste facility sites, Meister said, and often local governments tend to make more short-sighted, locally-oriented decisions.

It is very important that the citizens are represented by their governments in the siting process, however, since they are directly affected by the decisions, he added.

Up to 77 dead in Spanish crash

MALAGA, Spain (AP) — A chartered DC-10 loaded with Americans heading home from a Spanish vacation crashed on takeoff Monday, skidded across a highway and caught fire, killing at least 46 people and possibly as many as 77.

Officials said 113 others were injured, 14 of them seriously.

Many of the victims apparently burned to death in the tail section of the Spantax Airlines jetliner, which had been bound for New York from this Mediterranean resort in southern Spain. It was carrying a full complement of 380 passengers and a crew of 13, the airline said.

"The rear exits did not work," said Hal Lavine of Tamarac, Fla., one of the survivors. "People pushed forward. There was screaming and panic. A big cloud of black smoke poured into the cabin."

He said he believed many of the passengers in the rear were overcome by smoke and unable to get out in time.

The Spanish transportation minister, Luis Gamir, said at an airport news conference Monday night that 46 people were known dead, including two who died of their injuries in Carlos Haya Hospital, and 31 others were missing. He said 83 of the injured remained hospitalized, he said.

Rescuers would continue to search for victims in the wreckage through the night, Gamir said.

He said a definitive list of victims was not expected to be released until Tuesday.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Madrid said 210 American citizens and 85 Spaniards residing in the United States were aboard the plane, Flight No. 995, originating in Madrid with a stopover in Malaga. He said the embassy did not have names or know how many Americans were killed or hospitalized.

Carefree David, a tour broker which organizes tours and sells them to travel agencies, said in Miami that the agency had booked 208 travelers for a two-week tour of Spain that started Aug. 30 from New York. Leonard Lansburgh, president of the agency, said the people were from all over the United States and as far as he knew, not associated with any particular group. He said other travel agencies were believed to have booked other passengers.

He said a majority of the Americans were from the New York area, two to four people from Florida and that there were some Canadians on board.

Civil Air Authority investigators said preliminary findings pointed to engine failure as a cause of the crash. The pilot tried to bring the plane down immediately following liftoff and one of the engines was found in a field near the crash site.

"The rear exits did not work," said Hal Lavine of Tamarac, Fla., one of the survivors.

News Roundup

Thompson to repay Road Fund loan

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Gov. James R. Thompson has begun repaying $10 million he borrowed last month from the state's Road Fund to bolster the all-purpose General Fund, the state comptroller's office reported Monday.

But at the same time, Thompson's budget director, Robert Mandeville, said the administration has requests pending to shift up to $11 million into the General Fund from various other treasury accounts.

In a letter to Democratic Comptroller Roland Burris, the Republican governor said he intended to fully repay the $10 million taken from the road fund by the end of this week.

Israelis blast Syrians for 'breach'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli jets blasted Syrian and Palestinian military positions Monday in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and Lebanese radio stations reported that 30 soldiers and guerrillas were killed.

The new Israeli air strikes heightened the possibility of a major confrontation between Israeli and Syrian soldiers in Lebanon. It was the fourth time in five days that Israeli warplanes carried out raids against the Syrians to retaliate for what Israel called Syrian violations of the Lebanese cease-fire.

The Monday strikes left several military emplacements afire, Lebanese radio stations reported. Israel said the attacks ended Monday afternoon and all planes returned safely.

Israel says Vatican ignored killings

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican on Monday angrily reflected Israel's charges that the church kept silent about the Nazi massacre of Jews in World War II. The Israeli criticism was prompted by Pope John Paul II's decision to meet with PLO chief Yasser Arafat.

In an unusually tough statement, the Vatican called the Israeli accusation an "insult to the truth."

Representatives of international Jewish organizations, expressing the "deep shock of organized Jewry" about the papal audience scheduled for Wednesday, made a formal protest to the Vatican. Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, sworn enemy of the Jewish state, does not recognize Israel's existence.

Strike end returns 10,000 to school

(AP) — More than 10,000 students in the Chicago suburbs of Palatine and Rolling Meadows went back to school Monday after a tentative agreement ended a two-week strike by about 420 teachers and averted the threatened firing of some strikers.

Details of the settlement in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Elementary School District 15 were not disclosed Monday.

The agreement, reached late Sunday, averted the firing of 38 nonunion teachers. School officials had threatened to open two of the district's schools using substitutes to replace some of the 421 striking teachers.

GSC may denounce new library hours

By Robert Green
Staff Writer

A resolution opposing the reduction of hours at Morris Library may be proposed at the Graduate Student Council meeting at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Mississippi Room of the Student Center.

GSC representatives discussed the hours reduction at their last meeting and agreed to obtain input from constituents before acting on the matter.

services which the task force will have undertaken.

Each of the eight student organizations, he said, will look into financial statements of the different areas and construct its own survey. The task force will combine all the surveys into one final comprehensive survey before distributing it to a sample population representative of all the areas, he said.

The task force will have several sub-committees to assist in the survey and preparation processes, he said.

The sub-committees will consist of people from accounting and marketing, as well as computer programmers, to aid in translating financial statements into readable figures and to sort out details for the survey.

"To construct a non-biased report is a very difficult task," Kelly said.

"The task force not only will deal with the financial aspects, but also to find out what students feel about the services, whether they use them or know about them, and whether they think they are getting their money's worth," Kelly said.

Paul Matalonis, GSC president, said he expects the council to pass a resolution, and he said the council may also have some questions regarding the hours reductions for President Albert Somit, who was invited to field questions.

"We understand some of the reasoning and we want to offer some alternatives," Matalonis said. "We may also express some discontent."

Matalonis said the council may also pass a resolution proposing that a letter be sent to President Reagan opposing his veto of supplemental appropriations for Pell Grants.

Other items on the agenda include discussion of a resolution concerning the new Health Service emergency room procedure at Carbondale Memorial Hospital.

Guest speaker Sam McVay of the Health Service will address questions on the new policy, which went into effect at the beginning of the fall semester.

The new policy discontinues the $10 emergency room charge for students with true emergencies, but students who visit the emergency room for non-emergent medical conditions "can expect the Health Service to pay $30 of the bill for that visit and the remainder of the bill to be their responsibility," the policy change states.

The GSC resolution requests that the Health Service monitor the new policy and asks that the Health Service provide a very liberal definition of what constitutes an emergency.

The council will also discuss a resolution proposing changes in the SIU-C demonstrations policy.

Matalonis said the council may also discuss the administration's decision to leave the academic counseling position vacant to save money.

Carbondale Police Department and the SIU-C Security. But, it is used infrequently and as an instrument of self-defense, not an aggressive weapon, department members said.

Since January, the Carbondale Police have used Mace 13 to 15 times, said Tom McNamara, police spokesman.

Considering the size of the crowds the police deal with in Carbondale, that is average, he said.

The use of Mace by police is considered a last resort — an alternative to using nightsticks, said McNamara and Virgil Trummer, director of SIU-C Security.

Trummer said that before an officer can carry Mace, which is dispensed from a pistol-like canister, he or she must undergo department training concerning its operation and safety.

THE CARBONDALE POLICE also have rules and regulations on its use, said Art Wright, press officer.

The chemical should only be used to control a situation which is or is becoming violent, he said.

Also, an officer defending himself from an act of violence can resort to Mace or if an officer, attempting to arrest an individual, is met with resistance.

Mace is often used in crowd control because crowd psychology differs from individual psychology, McNamara said.

In touchy situations, a crowd could sway towards helping or resisting the police, he said, and sometimes it doesn't take much to persuade them either way.

The Carbondale police have encountered situations when a crowd has helped them make an arrest, but there have been other times, he said, when a crowd has tried to stop them from arresting someone.

So, if there is a troublemaker in a crowd situation, the police try to isolate the person and get them away from the crowd, McNamara said.

OFFICERS ARE ALSO told to use extreme caution if using Mace on an intoxicated person, Wright said, because the chemical may not affect them.

In most situations, one short burst of spray is effective, he said, and police must always report that Mace was used.

Police also have first-aid instructions for subjects that have been maced, Wright said. In a large crowd situation, they may not administer first-aid but if a subject was maced during an arrest, he or she is treated at the police station.

Usually, he said, the first-aid just involves washing the subject's eyes with cold water, which helps restore eyesight and curb irritation.

THE EFFECTS OF Mace are temporary, said Trummer. "Most of the symptoms will disappear within a half an hour to forty-five minutes," he said.

Trummer said that two areas of the human body — the skin and sight — are primarily affected. "The burning sensation felt by the person sprayed is due to the tendency of Mace to remove oil from the skin, which causes the drying, burning feeling," he said.

Mace also causes the mucous membranes in the eyes to water profusely thus creating a temporary loss of sight, he said.

The mucous membranes of the nose are also affected, said Dr. Jerry Thurman of Carbondale Memorial Hospital, but all of the effects are temporary.

"It's the irritation that causes the problems," he said.

McNamara said that persons sprayed by Mace usually do not require hospitalization.

"While Carbondale Police are trained in the necessary first-aid procedures, it is very rare that medical attention is required," he said.

We need the money for science education

MONEY FOR El Salvadorans to kill El Salvadorans? Yes. Money for more and deadlier weapons to kill the rest of the world? Yes. What's one of our biggest problems in education now? A shortage of science teachers. But here's the punch line: What about money for science education? NO!

Even Republican congressmen and White House aides are balking at President Reagan's proposals to eliminate all programs for science education except graduate fellowships. The House of Representatives voted to authorize $35 million for 1983 but the Senate Appropriations Committee has recommended only the $15 million requested by Reagan for graduate fellowships.

LAST YEAR Congress reduced the science education budget from $70.7 million in fiscal 1981 to $20.9 million in fiscal 1982 after Reagan requested that no money be spent on these programs. The rationale behind reductions — the administration belief that science education is "a state and local responsibility."

How does science education that the administration calls a national problem become a local responsibility requiring a local solution?

CURRENTLY THERE ARE at least five bills requesting more money for science education. This is a step in the right direction but unless care is taken it may be resurrecting the old problem of too many fragmented programs.

There is a definite decline in science education, research and training. More money and better planning are needed and it begins with a higher priority for science education. Perhaps El Salvador and the Pentagon could wait.

Letters

Comments not meant as slur on Malaysians

In reference to the recent (DE, Aug. 31) letter signed by 132 people and concerning Malaysian students, I was horrified by the extent to which my comments had been misinterpreted.

First, let me emphasize that what a graduate assistant says in any newspaper interview is not to be construed as reflecting the opinion or attitude of the International Services office. Grad assistants in this office are responsible for their own comments and actions.

Second, I will attempt to clarify the misunderstandings item-by-item:

— At no point in the interview did I mention anything about "Friday and Saturday night."

— In the context of the discussion I had with the reporter, the term "ghetto" merely means a concentration of one national group in one housing area, and nothing more.

— In my use of English, the comment that "there are not enough Malaysian women to go around (for Malaysian males)" does not by any standards suggest promiscuity.

— My intention was to sympathize with all foreign students in general in terms of a universal problem at SIU-C: the difficulty of making American friends. This is a genuine concern and an important one, despite Mr. Rahdi's dismissal of it. My brief analysis of the Malaysian dating situation, gleaned from many conversations with Malaysian acquaintances, was mentioned only as an example of what most national groups at SIU-C put up with. This comment of mine, though quoted accurately, was printed out of context of the actual conversation I had with the reporter. Had the interview been written up more faithfully and thoughtfully, the quote would have appeared in its proper place and thus might not have caused such virulent controversy.

— In any case, I had no idea that this comment would cause offense. A concern about dating or male-female ratios bears no stigma in Western cultures; if, for example, a similar comment were made about some American students overseas, it probably would be regarded merely as interesting or revealing information. My mistake, despite good intentions, was to forget that some national groups about whom I still have much to learn sometimes have different reactions.

My fifteen years' residence in four different European countries afforded me with plenty of knowledge about Western cultures but very little experience with Asian ones. Nonetheless, I should have considered the possible reactions more carefully before citing specific examples by specific nationality.

But Malaysians are, I trust, good-natured. I assume they will accept my blunder as a well-intentioned effort to speak up for them, and consider the matter a learning experience for all concerned. — Scott South, Graduate Student, Higher Education.

Viewpoint
Intellectualism is no substitute for real love and compassion

By the time this letter is published, my return address may no longer be valid, because I will have become a resident of roadside parks and will be fighting my war of survival from the back of my Pinto station wagon.

Mr. Granato (DE, Aug. 30), used an unnamed source in the Department of Public Aid to dispute my contention that only Medicaid recipients who are actively searching for employment are eligible for dentures. Now, he states that this applies only to those who are able to, but will not seek, work.

The facts are that the memo I referred to says no such thing. This memo was sent to all Medicaid recipients including those on Social Security and people who have been found totally disabled after exhaustive testing; and contains no exceptions for elderly or disabled recipients.

Besides, since persons able to work who refuse to do so are already eligible to have all public aid benefits cut off, such a memo would have to be considered superfluous. If Public Aid has changed its position on dentures, it has made no public announcement of it; therefore I call upon Mr. Granato, if he wishes to make his rebuttal of his claim credible, to reveal the name of his source in Public Aid.

As to Mr. Granato's claim that it would be impossible for children to be going hungry in Illinois, he again fails to disclose the identity of his source in Public Aid. My claim is based on a statement made by the director of Public Aid, and it is a matter of public record and was carried on both WCIL and WINI. Now, Mr. Granato, I say "put up or shut up." Either reveal the name of the person making claims disputing those of the Gov. Thompson-appointed head of Public Aid, or admit that your contentions have no credibility.

Mr. Granato uses the Chicago Housing Authority's performance as a reason for abolishing social programs. It may be true that many programs are replete with fraud and mismanagement; however, the solution is better management, not a denial to the underprivileged of the meager benefits they now receive.

I will point out that, if Mr. Granato's solution was employed in relation to giving the war-mad generals in the Pentagon money to buy more toys for mass murder, they would have virtually no play things. It seems that two standards exist among reactionaries, one for the poor that would deny them: any hope, and a second that grants the planners of human destruction every wish regardless of how much they squander.

In relation to persons like myself who cannot wait for economic resurrection, Mr. Granato offers only the question of "What is the alternative?" and then launches into a long-winded dissertation on what he regards as my solution.

My solution is, of course, to give people facing economic annihilation jobs, jobs that will allow them to make contributions to our society, jobs that will give them dignity. They should be given jobs now, not when Reagan and his corporate bandit friends have plundered this nation to the fulfillment of their desires.

Finally, Mr. Granato does not like my emotionalism. Well, that's tough, because I am a warrior of the Outlaw Confederation, albeit an aging one. Too often in my ministry for the gods and goddesses of the Light, I have seen the shoddiness of intellectualism substituted for love and compassion; and I would ill serve those whose precepts and principles I adhere to if I did not express my anger at the denial of the means of the underprivileged.

As for myself, I look to the future without personal fear for as a warrior of the Outlaw Confederation I will survive; and I will live to officiate at the burial of Reaganomics, the greedy Moral Majority who would trample not only the poor, but sound a death knell to freedom, and the rest of those who have no compassion or love for humanity. — Bob Phillips, Carbondale.

The mirror provides minimal ego gratification, a constant reminder that they don't look like The Rolling Stones, or even like The Pretenders.

Their fetish deserves the audience it got at The Greater Impersonators Talent Show, sponsored by the Student Programming Council and WIDB. The audience watched others live out their rock and roll fantasies.

The night's performances will be forever contained on the SPC video which was made. All the WIDB disc jockeys, who were the contest judges, had plenty of time to ad lib on the microphone during lapses of time when bands weren't ready, didn't show, or showed without their group's album.

Contest runner-up, Stacey Hordack, jumping-jacked her way through "Let's Get Physical." She looked like Olivia, her mouth turned down in that same deliberate pout.

The boys in the audience loved it.

The winning air band emulated the stage antics of AC/DC. The drummer dramatically removed his shirt before the song and the guitarist dressed in preppy attire, making sure his hopping feet hit every inch of the stage while they did their impression of the screeching "Back in Black."

The group to win second place, The Strolling Bones, imitated The Rolling Stones.

But in terms of audience response, the real winners were the group impersonating Van Halen. Andy Mason, looking more like Barry Manilow than Eddie Van Halen, nevertheless had a driven appeal. He utilized his past experience in gymnastics with high jumps, leg kicks, and contorted ground-level air guitar playing throughout, "You Really Got Me."

Perhaps this group won audience sentiment by switching roles for a Romantics number. Yet the crowd insisted they do an encore as Van Halen.

John Wagner, from the Van Halen band, said about playing a real guitar in the future "I never got over 25 words a minute in typing, so how the hell am I gonna play guitar?" Except in his fantasies.

Prof studies mysteries of marijuana

By Art Herron
Staff Writer

Professor Norman Doorenbos, dean of the College of Science, is highly educated about plants and their medicinal uses. Marijuana is one of the plants about which he knows plenty.

Doorenbos will share some of his knowledge at 7 p.m. Tuesday when he gives an illustrated presentation entitled "Marijuana, Facts and Fiction" in Ballroom B.

This is Doorenbos' fifth year at SIUC where he is a professor of physiology in addition to his duties as dean. Doorenbos arrived here from the University of Mississippi, where he worked for 10 years.

While he was at the University of Mississippi in 1968, he was invited to participate in the National Marijuana Program. Doorenbos was selected because of his expertise in drug research. The objective of the program was to discover drugs in the plant that can be used to treat diseases.

Doorenbos was selected by the government to grow the plant, conduct botanical studies and to identify the different drugs in the plant or its drug makeup. Doorenbos said that the significance of learning the plant materials meant that any drug separated from it would be something previously unknown.

The research is ongoing and different strains or drugs in marijuana are still being discovered.

Doorenbos said that when the research began, nothing was known about the plant's strength.

"There was no way to determine how many drugs were in the plant material," Doorenbos said. "We were to prepare and furnish analyzed, research quality marijuana to other scientists studying its effects on animals and people."

The marijuana was grown and tested at the University of Mississippi where the National Marijuana Farm is located. It is the only legal marijuana farm in the United States.

Doorenbos said it's easy to stay interested in the subject despite studying it since 1968.

"New things are happening all the time," Doorenbos said. "There are lots of surprises. It's even fun to learn what was already known. A lot was folklore."

Marijuana researcher Norman Doorenbos tests the strength of the drug with a High Pressure Liquid Chromatograph.

"It's like exploring," he said. "If you know in advance what you're going to find, it's not interesting."

Doorenbos has always been interested in chemistry, science and the outdoors. He combined his interests in the study of plants.

Marijuana has been proven to be an effective drug in combating glaucoma. Doorenbos, however, doesn't think it's as good as the three principal drugs used to reduce eye pressure problems.

"First, it's not actively placed in the eye," Doorenbos said, "and it's duration of action is short. Marijuana loses its effectiveness after about four hours."

Two of the medicines are derived from plants and one comes from animals.

Doorenbos said that virtually all the drugs people use are poisonous, although the beneficial effects of some can outweigh the harmful. But Doorenbos said that just because a property is useful, it doesn't make it safe to use.

Doorenbos spends a lot of his free time lecturing on marijuana. He gives about 1,000 talks a year. He estimates that he's spoken at over 300 different colleges and universities. Doorenbos said that he's lectured in almost 40 states, including 15 colleges in Illinois, 25 in Alabama and 35 in Mississippi. Doorenbos has also talked at many overseas institutions.

Priest provides haven for runaways

By Art Herron
Staff Writer

When six children under 16 knocked on Father Bruce Ritter's door at 2 a.m. in the middle of a blizzard, Ritter knew something had to be done. "They tried to look innocent," Ritter said. "They wanted to sleep on my floor so I gave them food and blankets."

"The next morning, they went out and brought over four more."

The 10 had been staying in an abandoned building where junkies were exploiting them sexually, he said. When the children stopped complying, the junkies burned them out of the building.

About 150 to 200 people attended a talk given Sunday in the Newman Center by Ritter, a Franciscan priest who deals with teenage runaways in New York City, on "children of the streets, victims of victimless crimes."

Ritter taught medieval history and dogma at Manhattan College in New York City for 10 years. At the urging of some students to get involved with problems of the real world, he said, he decided to do just that.

After his superiors told him he was on his own, he lived and worked among the poor in the slums of the East Side of New York, an area, he said, where there is practically no law and order. He moved into a junkie's apartment by the East River.

"Of 75 apartments in my building," said Ritter, "at least 60 belonged to junkies and dealers. For a long time they all thought I was a narc."

After moving in, Ritter said he was robbed once a day for over a month until there was nothing left to take.

His work with youngsters came by accident.

"At first I thought it would be easy to find help for the kids," Ritter said of the 10 he had taken in. "I called over 24 child-care agencies. But nobody wanted them. They were either too old, too young, too sick or anything else that applied. The real reason was that nobody really operated a program for these types of kids."

More children began showing up. Ritter was advised by his superiors to get rid of them, but he couldn't do it. He was told he was breaking a number of laws, but the children kept coming. "One time the kids brought me someone who they said was Ernie," Ritter said. "Ernie was 12 years old and had been found sleeping in a big, plastic garbage can."

Ritter needed more space and help. He went back to Manhattan College and asked his students for help. About six men and some women moved into his neighborhood.

In exchange for 80 to 100 hours of work a week he gave them room and board. To get additional space, they started taking over more and more of the apartments that the junkies had abandoned.

After about five years, they decided to obtain a license to establish "Covenant House." A program was also set up in the Times Square area called "Under 21."

The neighborhood surrounding the shelter is extremely bad. In the 10 blocks surrounding his home, Ritter said there are at least 200 sex-related industries.

"It's no place for a child," Ritter said. "Yet thousands are there."

"Under 21," Ritter's crisis center, is open 24 hours a day.

"We literally never close," Ritter said. "Kids can come there anytime with no questions asked. We provide food, clothing, shelter and protection from pimps. Mainly, we give them a chance to go home again."

Last year, Ritter's shelter was able to send 2,000 children back home to almost every state in the country. But sometimes parents don't want their children back, Ritter said. "The saddest day for my kids is Mother's Day," Ritter said.

The Times Square rate of venereal disease runs at about 95 percent, but the biggest danger to Ritter's children is murder, Ritter said literally hundreds of his youths have been raped or tortured.

Ritter remembers one instance particularly well.

"There was a 17-year-old girl from out of state who came to New York to experience the romanticism of Times Square. She made the mistake of having a cup of coffee with a pimp. He dragged her."

"He kept her prisoner for 10 days while torturing and dragging her. Then the pimp turned her on the streets."

Ritter said one night the girl jumped out of the pimp's car at a stop light.

"Two of my staff members miraculously happened to be standing there. They rescued her and then took her to a hospital. The next day the pimp came to see me and demanded his property back. He said he owned her and she was worth $3,000 to $4,000 a year tax free to him."

Ritter refused.

Ritter said the business of sex is not only a New York City phenomenon.

"Sex is big business in America," Ritter said. "The problem lies with adults, not with the kids."

Ritter said 25,000 children have come to the centers in five years.

"We're overwhelmed. We average around 1,000 kids a month now. I've also been asked to open centers in other places," Ritter said.

Ritter said 20 percent of the children he comes in contact with end up going home, 20 percent end up in some residential system such as foster homes and 10 percent are set up in apartments and employment.

Airport gets funds to buy land for construction of new runway

It may be several years before a third runway is built at the Southern Illinois Airport, Gary Shafer, the airport manager, said Monday.

The airport was awarded $166,500 from the Airport Trust Fund — money collected from airport users — to purchase about 50 acres southwest of the present airport and start construction on a runway parallel to the existing north-south strip.

While he hopes no problems arise acquiring the land, Shafer said he couldn't rule out the possibility.

The airport also may be deciding what to do with a spare control tower if about $1 million in funds are approved to build a new tower.

U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-24th District, tacked the funds onto a Federal Aviation Agency appropriations bill. The tower is overcrowded, according to Simon aide David Carle, and some operations have been forced from the tower into rented trailers at the airport.

Shafer said the question of what to do with the present tower has never been addressed because the airport has never been this close to having a new tower.

He said if the funds are approved, construction of a tower could begin next July.

"There aren't too many options of what to do with the tower," Shafer said.

Race classification issue not just black or white

By David McCormick
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A 48-year-old woman descended from an 18th century slave and a white planter testified Monday against a Louisiana law that permits her to be classified as black because she has more than one-32nd "Negro blood."

Susie Guillory Phipps is one of six members of a Lake Charles-area family suing to have the state Bureau of Vital Records change the racial classification on their birth certificates from black to white.

The state refused to do so under a 1970 law declaring that anyone with at least one-32nd "Negro blood" can be legally classified as black. The law was intended to reform an old Jim Crow statute that relied on "common report" in determining an infant's race, according to Mrs. Phipps' attorney.

"I am white," the light-skinned woman with Caucasian features and straight black hair told a hearing officer in New Orleans district court.

Her suit mentions no harm that may have resulted from being classified as black.

Mrs. Phipps, who described herself as the darkest member of her family, said other relatives were reluctant to testify for fear the state would change the birth certificates of their blond-haired, blue-eyed children from white to black.

Although the suit was brought under the name "Jane Doe," Mrs. Phipps gave her name in open court. News photographers took pictures of her.

Begue said the matter was turned over to a hearing officer because of the volumes of evidence, including genealogical charts spanning seven generations, and an extensive family photo record.

The attorney said the family approached him after one of its members applied for a copy of her birth certificate to obtain a passport and was shocked to find she was classified as black.

Palmist at E-Night made some believers

By Abigail Kimmel
Entertainment Editor

The world is full of skeptics and non-believers, especially when it comes to palmistry and astrology.

But, at E-Night, Marcella Ruble made believers out of a few people. Or at least she made them reconsider.

After sitting in line for over three hours, holding each other's places while taking turns fetching soda and chips and going over the latest news with a friend while waiting, one by one they went up to the table where Ruble sat holding court.

She asked their date of birth. The time they were born and the location. Sometimes she would murmur something only to the patron, other times she would exclaim "Oh, how interesting, you have Mars in Gemini!" and would proceed to tell the waiting, listening group the significance of such a planetary location.

Some people played it pretty cool, not giving much away until she hit upon something really close to home. Others were clearly excited to have their stars forecast and palms read.

To break up the monotony for those gathered to meet and consult with her, she explained how astrology is much more advanced than palmistry due to the qualitative psychological studies done with astrology and through the use of computers to trace the natal chart. Every so often, she characterized the traits of a particular sign or explained what certain lines and mounds on the hands meant.

Ruble stressed that astrology is not something to live one's life by. She said "It's not going to save you or make you. You can still and should create your own destiny. Astrology and palmistry can be used as a tool and a guide. But it is only harmful when it becomes an obsession. Anything that is essentially positive, even religion, can become negative when it becomes an obsession." Apparently Ruble can call the cards, or stars and lines, with an eerie accuracy.

Pam Czarny, Aries and freshman in psychology, and Lisa Parisi, Taurus and freshman in geology, were waiting excitedly for their friend. Czarny was impressed that Ruble knew she didn't sing very well — she got kicked out of the school choir in grade school because she couldn't carry a tune.

And Parisi was amazed that Ruble knew she wanted to live by water — she's a lifeguard and adores the water, she said.

When Denise Priess, Leo and freshman in business administration came up to her friends, her eyes were wide.

"You guys! She knew about the guardian angel!" Ruble told Priess that she is very independent, but that she'll need a sort of guardian angel to look after her. Priess' grandmother had given Priess a pendant with a guardian angel just before she came here to school. She pulled the necklace from inside her shirt and all the girls laughed.

Ruble finally saw that there was no way to read everyone's forecast, so she led the group in mass palmistry, explaining what each line meant, and having different members of the group hold up their hands to show what she meant. People laughed most of the time, or shrieked because they didn't like having a certain kind of line.

GRAVITY AFFECTS YOUR BODY

If you had been a member of the crew on the 84-day Skylab space mission, you would have had a first-hand experience on how the body reacts in a gravity-free world. And if you thought your body had stopped "growing," you might be in for a surprise. All of the astronauts while on that mission grew taller, some of them almost two inches taller. Why? Without the pull of gravity, the body loosens up. The distance between each disc in the spinal column expands slightly.

Here on Earth, we all know how important the force of gravity is in keeping our feet on the ground. In fact, the whole body is affected by this force. If your spine is in proper alignment, this is one sign of good health. But if it isn't, then you may be suffering unnecessarily from back pain and other discomforts. If that's the case, you may want to consider an examination to find out how you can get relief.

Do you have a question?

Kids' gift plan needs Santas

By Mary Pries
Staff Writer

Christmas shopping may not immediately concern most people, but Care For Kids will soon be shopping for people to buy presents for underprivileged children.

Dan Thompson, who started a Care For Kids program in Peoria three years ago, plans to begin a similar program in Jackson County by asking people in October to purchase a Christmas gift for a child.

Thompson said that Tim Weber, coordinator of Hill House Out-Patient and Prevention Services, has been asked to provide the names of children who have been helped at the center.

Weber said, "After I checked out what Thompson has done in the past, I was pretty impressed and said I would help. However, we don't have the time to organize, so that will be up to Thompson."

Thompson said no money is needed to get the program started. The most money spent is by people purchasing presents.

"I really want to be able to get gifts to children with no red tape and no strings attached," he said.

Thompson said he will get a list of what each child would like for Christmas. When people interested in buying a gift call him, he will tell them what the child wants.

"I will put a $25 limit on it to keep children from getting jealous, but if people spend more I can't stop them," he said.

The presents will be brought to a stated location and Thompson will probably deliver them right before Christmas. If the people who give the gifts want to go with him to deliver them, Thompson said he would probably allow it.

"I know college students are on limited incomes, but I think they might be interested in giving," said Thompson. "I really hope for community people to get involved."

Weber said he couldn't see any pitfalls in his idea but that the parents would not accept charity for their children. "Some parents could be insulted so I think we should be careful to see that the parents are involved. I am sure the children will be excited and overjoyed."

Thompson said he would like to get presents for as many children as he can. "My biggest fear is that someday I will get more children than I can find people to buy presents for. I don't know what I would do. I would probably try to buy the presents myself."

The names of all gift givers will be filed so that they can be contacted next year to find out if they would like to give again. Thompson said this year will be difficult since he doesn't have a file of names.

"I don't know if I will be able to get as many people involved here as I did in Peoria. The first year in Peoria we had 22 families and the second year we had 200," Thompson said. "I remember my wife said it just wasn't going to go over because Caterpillar was on strike. However, after I left Peoria the program stopped because no one would take it over."

No acting experience is required. All you have to do to become a star in our book is to make an appointment during the next two weeks to have your Senior Portrait made by our Varden Studio photographer.

Don't be camera shy. The photo session places you under no monetary obligation.

You pay only a $3 sitting fee. And even that fee will be waived if you purchase, at the time of sitting, a copy of the 1983 Obelisk II featuring your smiling glossy.

We supply the lights and camera; you supply the action. Call the Obelisk Office at 536-7768. Or stop by the registration table in the Student Center to schedule your appointment.

Of course, we can't promise that this one picture will make you a celebrity. But who knows? If we can make an elephant a star, why not you?

Nobel winners featured in economics lectures

Two Nobel Prize winners will be featured this fall in a speaker series being planned by the Economics Department.

W. Arthur Lewis of Princeton University and Theodore Schultz of the University of Chicago, co-recipients of the 1979 Nobel Prize for economics, are scheduled to speak in a series of lectures on economic development, according to Robert Ellis, chairman of the Economics Department.

Ellis said the department was still trying to get other top economists to lecture.

"We are all very excited about Professors Schultz and Lewis," he said.

Schultz has written many articles including, "Investing in People: The Economics of Population Quality," and "The Role of Education and of Research."

Lewis is the author of "The Evolution of the International Economic Order," and "Some Aspects of Economic Development."

Ellis said dates for the lectures are still tentative.

Huskies pass Pitt as No. 1 team

By Herschel Nissensohn
AP Sports Writer

For the first time in its history, the University of Washington is the No. 1 team in college football.

The Huskies replaced Pitt at the top of The Associated Press poll Monday, while Florida also jumped to its highest ranking ever — fifth place — and the Oklahoma Sooners became the first casualty of the season, dropping out of the Top Twenty after losing to West Virginia.

Pitt and Washington had been 1-2 in the preseason and first regular-season polls. But the Huskies vaulted over the Panthers by swamping Texas-El Paso 55-0, while Pitt was posting a sloppily played 7-6 triumph over North Carolina.

Washington, which had never been higher than third since the AP ratings began in 1936, received 28 first-place votes and 1,132 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of 60 sports writers and sportscasters. Pitt totaled 16 first-place ballots and 1,078 points.

"It doesn't make any difference," Pitt Coach Foge Fazio said when informed of the new ratings. "I never said we were the No. 1 team in the nation. But when the No. 1 team plays No. 5 (North Carolina's ranking last week), it's not supposed to be a blowout by any means. Now that we're No. 2 we've just got to try harder."

Nebraska and Alabama held onto the third and fourth positions. Nebraska received eight first-place votes and 1,073 points for a 42-7 trouncing of Iowa, while Alabama, a 45-7 winner over Georgia Tech, received the remaining six first-place votes and 1,021 points.

North Carolina, fifth last week, slipped to 11th, while Florida jumped from 11th to fifth with 886 points in the wake of a 17-9 victory over Southern California. The Gators' highest ranking previously was seventh.

with the team during the first week of practice, but has been relegated to spectator since the discovery of a heart murmur two weeks ago. Auld confirmed that Rutherford will not be competing for the Salukis this fall. Although she will remain on campus to attend classes, the outlook for her tennis career is gloomy.

Even though the netters now stand 2-0 on the season and have their first tourney win under their belts, far more competitive opponents are waiting in the wings. Teams such as Louisville and Memphis State, Saluki opponents this weekend in Carbondale, will test the spirit of this year's freshmen duo even further.

Hopefully, this fall season will give both the rookies and their Saluki teammates the experience they need to make a successful debut in their new spring domain, the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference.

Volleyball team finds the going is tough

By Jackie Rodgers
Associate Sports Editor

Coach Debbie Hunter still doesn't know what went wrong. "To tell the truth, I'm surprised," she said. "We played so very well the day before and we played not so well the next day."

Hunter was referring to the Salukis' 15-3, 15-5, 15-10 loss to Purdue Sunday night in West Lafayette, Ind. The loss dropped the Salukis' record to 4-2. It also burst Hunter's bubble of an SIU-C victory over one of the top two teams in the Midwest — Northwestern and Purdue. SIU-C lost to NU Saturday night.

"I guess it is pretty good for a championship team — and I do consider us a championship team — to come home from a road trip with a .500 record," Hunter said. "We definitely learned a lot this weekend, especially playing teams the caliber of Northwestern and Purdue."

The Wildcats and the Boilermakers are ranked Nos. 11 and 15 in the Tachikara Top Twenty. SIU-C is gaining a national reputation as well. The Salukis received mention in the poll.

Failure to execute fundamentals such as passing and serving led to SIU-C's downfall Sunday. The Salukis had seven ball handling errors, compared to the Boilermakers' four.

The Saluki offense was equally feeble, mustering only a .088 attack percentage. Outside hitter Mary Maxwell was the most efficient attacker with a .250 efficiency.

"We didn't lose because Purdue really put it to us and beat us," Hunter said. "It was all related to our inability to play within our system, and execute the fundamentals."

Hunter said the Boilermakers employed the unconventional round-house serve to which the Salukis had trouble adjusting. She admitted that one or two of her players were intimidated by the height of the Boilermakers. The shortest starter was Annette Bauer, a 5-10 setter.

The Boilermakers amassed 36 kills to the Salukis' 25. SIU-C actually had more attempts than Purdue, 102-97, but were unable to put the ball away.

The conditions inside the newly constructed volleyball arena may have had an effect on the Salukis' lackluster performance, Hunter said. She said the facility is the best in the Midwest for volleyball, but that there was no air conditioning on Sunday. There was also a problem with condensation — similar to the one in Davies — that left the floor wet and hazardous.

Hunter said if she had known the heat and humidity were going to be so bad she would have limited the warm-up. She said the Salukis usually have a 45-minute to an hour warm-up before each match. They went through the entire warmup preceding this match, but shouldn't have, according to Hunter.

"It was just too hot to do that," she said. "The kids lost quite a bit of fluids and energy before they even began to play. Lisa (Cummins, SIU-C's freshman starter) hyperventilated before the match began."

Women harriers suffer dual loss

Dean Kirk
Staff Writer

The SIU-C women's cross country team suffered a case of the "first meet jitters" this weekend at a double dual meet in Normal.

At least that's how Coach Claudia Blackman assessed the harriers' performance as they were defeated by Illinois State 50-15 and by University of Illinois 48-15 at the Illinois State University Golf Course. ISU defeated the Illini 32-23.

Blackman said that even though the Salukis stuck with the team strategy of running in a pack, they were out-distanced by runners from ISU and Illinois.

She also noted that the harriers might have lost some of their motivation when they lost sight of the leaders of the race.

Another possible factor contributing to the Salukis' showing was the fact that ISU's Hilda Perez and Margaret Haskel, who finished fifth and seventh respectively, appeared to Blackman to have trained more than the other competitors, "at least from what they showed in the race," she said.

Wendy Van Mierlo of ISU won the meet with a time of 17:23 and was followed by teammate Sarah Schumacher. Illinois' Marianne Dickerson and Julie Lantis finished third and fourth respectively.

SIU-C's highest finisher was Rosa Mitchell, who finished 13th overall with a time of 19:17.

Despite the showing, Blackman is still optimistic about the squad.

"It's not like I've lost hope," she said. "We just don't need to panic right now."

She expects that the squad should show "much more improvement." She said she was encouraged by the fact that Mitchell, Lisa Riemund, Sally Zack and Lori Ann Bertram, who all finished within 30 seconds of each other, stayed together enough to help each other throughout the race.

The Salukis' next meet will again be at the Illinois State University Golf Course on Saturday where they will be competing in the Illinois State Invitational.

Big plays save stalled Salukis

By Dan Devine
Staff Writer

"I think we're going to be a big play team," said SIU-C coach Rey Dempsey after the Salukis beat Illinois State 16-0 Saturday night at Normal. "I think we'll block a kick when we need it."

The Salukis had better be a big play team. It doesn't look like they'll win by stringing together a lot of little plays — like four- or five-yard runs for example. SIU-C had only 60 yards on the Redbird carpet, and have only 202 yards rushing after two games. In their opener, 80 of those yards came during garbage time, as the Salukis raced downfield in only three plays against a tired and second string defense in the waning moments of a decided game.

"I think they played better than they did against Western," said Dempsey when asked about his offensive line. "I think they made an improvement."

Fullback Corky Field was the Salukis' leading ground gainer this week, picking up 42 yards in eight carries. Jeff Ware had 14 yards in seven carries. Tony Anderson replaced Derrick Taylor early and ran 14 times for a total of one yard. Taylor ran once, and then came out, still troubled by a shoulder injury suffered the week before.

The Salukis prevailed in the end however, because Dempsey got his big plays, and the defense frustrated the Redbirds by caving in a weak offensive front.

"They looked outstanding," said Dempsey.

Monday the Saluki coaching staff named its individual award winners, picking three defensive and two offensive stars. The defenders were defensive tackle Ken Foster, linebacker Granville Butler and cornerback Terry Taylor. Offensively the coaches tabbed running back Ware and offensive tackle Brad Pilgard.

Foster had seven tackles, recovered a fumble and was part of a pass rush that may have convinced a normally wide open Redbird team into throwing the ball only 19 times. Butler had 12 tackles, second on the team to John Harper, who was the team's nominee for MVC defensive player of the week. Taylor had his third interception of the year and added five tackles.

Ware led the team with an 81 percent grade, returned four punts for 41 yards and scored the winning touchdown with a three yard sweep in the third quarter. Pilgard played with his thumb heavily bandaged and fixed in a special cast. He dislocated it in two places in the Western game.

Quarterback Rick Johnson was the team's nominee for MVC offensive player of the week. He was 22 of 42 for 238 yards, to supply most of the Salukis' offense. Those 22 completions broke Jim Hart's school record of 21, and the 42 attempts are now second to Hart's standard of 47. The St. Louis quarterback was 21 of 47 in 1985 and holds most of the Saluki passing records.

Johnson was responsible for the Salukis' big plays. After a slow start, he made some key passes in the second half, first connecting twice on third and long to keep the Salukis first touchdown drive alive, and then hitting Marvin Hinton for a 43-yard touchdown pass that put the game away.

Rookie netters find new home at SIU-C

Freshman year.

Some of us are blindly trudging our way through this state of naivety now. The rest of us have served our sentence and are pursuing a degree of one kind or another. But there is a different breed of freshmen, so to speak. This breed not only must face the harrowing experience of entering a major university, but also must deal with a far greater pressure — competing on an intercollegiate athletic team.

Three such freshmen are currently laboring for Coach Judy Auld's women's tennis team, Kris Stauffer, Mary Pat Kramer and Julie Rutherford.

Stauffer hails from Campaign and teams up with sophomore Maureen Harney at the fourth doubles position, and poses a serious threat to her teammates occupying the first three slots. Stauffer understands the meaning of intensity.

"I'm used to messing around, having only one or two tough matches a year," she said. "Here they're all going to be tough."

Although Stauffer is not a starter for Auld, her attitude is not one of disappointment.

"Earlier I was real nervous. I felt pressured," she explained. "Now I just say to myself, 'You're just a freshman. You can't go out there and expect to beat everybody.'"

That level-headedness is part of the reason that Auld is so pleased with her freshman netter.

"I like her style of play," she noted. "She's aggressive and real consistent."

Auld also explained Stauffer's role on what may be the most talent-laden squad that the eight-year veteran has ever coached.

"Kris needs some self-confidence," said Auld, "but she could play some doubles for us. It's nice to know I have someone like Kris."

Stauffer also realizes the need for self-confidence on the collegiate court.

"I think I could do well in doubles," she said. "I like doubles, almost more than singles. I guess I feel more comfortable with doubles."

Self-confidence is a virtue exemplified by this year's top recruit, Mary Pat Kramer, a blue-chipper from Waterloo, Iowa.

"I would label myself as a singles player because I'm more confident in my singles than in my doubles," she explained.

If Kramer lacks any confidence in her doubles game it was ill-apparent last weekend in Normal when she teamed with sophomore Stacey Sherman to destroy both her Illinois State and Western Illinois foes. She showed little more mercy in easily disposing of her singles opponents.

"Mary Pat is a very determined person. She's never going to give up," Auld said. "She forces the other person to make mistakes. She's a very smart player."

Kramer agreed with her coach's assessment. "I usually out-consist everyone," she said.

But Kramer, who finished in the top five in Iowa all four years of her high school career, hesitated in talking about her own accomplishments, preferring to expound on the SIU-C team.

"I think the team will help me develop and improve as a player," she said. "That's my main goal as a college player." She also said that she believes that "this team could win the conference if we play well."
